Whitney Says Piano Tuner Is No Labor Man

Merchants Busy, But Not "Dead Ones" Yet

There is another side to the apparent lack of interest in the Merchants' Association. Some of the members think that the President was a little harsh in his remarks yesterday, but they are not disposed to take serious offense, believing it better to know of a mistake than to stir up a mess.

One of the members who is enthusiastic over the work that can be done by the Association and believes in its success, said this morning:

"The lack of interest in the affairs of the Association are certainly to be regretted. Possibly it should not be called lack of interest either, but the facts of the matter are that many members of the Directorate are very busy men about town and sometimes find it hard to attend meetings at any given hour."

"Among the members, the same class is to be found and a failure to realize that the Association is constantly called upon to act on matters of great interest to the business community and that the individual members should not leave it all up to the directors, has been the cause of non-attendance at general meetings."

"The president, secretary and directors of the Association have been particularly active during the past year in urging legislation beneficial to the Territory and influencing appointments by the Federal Government, and have been particularly active in connection matters. Working in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce, the Association unquestionably accomplishes a particular mission and a disbandment or even merging of its members into the Chamber of Commerce would prove a loss in the effective work done by the two separate organizations along through different channels for a common end."

Hartwell Bitten By Dog

Chief Justice Hartwell has been bitten by a dog again. The dog belongs to George R. Carter, once Governor of the Territory of Hawaii.

The bite is really quite a serious one, one of the fingers of the hand with which the Chief Justice writes his legal opinions being nearly bitten off. Several stitches had to be taken in it, and now the Chief Justice is obliged to go about with his hand swathed in huge bandages, and is confined at his home, unable to go to his office.

The biting occurred night before last. The Chief Justice left his home to stroll over to Carter's, and was followed by his little dog, which risked being found in contempt of court by not going back when ordered.

When the Chief Justice and his dog reached the yard in which stands the house of the former Governor, two more dogs rushed out. They were large dogs with strenuous dispositions, and they resented the intrusion of the fief. With exultant yelps and howls they precipitated themselves upon the small dog, which

Vivas Goes Free

Attorney Vivas of Walluku was this morning discharged from custody by Chief Justice Hartwell, who granted his petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

The Chief Justice in discharging the prisoner did so merely on technical grounds. He did not enter at all into the question as to whether or not Vivas had been in contempt of court, which was the reason for his being committed to jail for five days by District Magistrate McKay of Walluku. The law does not allow of any appeal on such a question.

The reason the Chief Justice granted the petition was that the commitment was not in proper form. It only specified that Vivas was committed to jail for contempt of court. Section 3073 of the Revised Laws specifies that "whenever any person shall be adjudged guilty of any contempt or sentenced therefor, the particular circumstances of the offense shall be fully set forth in such judgment and in the order or warrant of commitment."

This was not done in the Vivas case, and as a consequence, he goes free. But he has already served four days of the five-day sentence.

The hearing took place at the home of the Chief Justice this morning, Hartwell not being able, on account of a dog-bite, to be in court. Vivas was represented by two attorneys, Magoon and Humphreys.

Lenord's Tuning All For Pianos

"Lenord stayed at my house for about six weeks," said Fred Whitney of Irwin & Co., this afternoon. "I know absolutely nothing about him. He was a stranger to me, and I took him for a visiting capitalist. However, from what I do know about the man, I feel convinced that he is not a labor agent or anything of the sort, and I do not believe that report for a moment. For that matter he was so talkative by nature that I feel sure that he could not have kept such a thing to himself had it been a fact."

Thomas Wall, of Wall, Nichols Co., stated this afternoon that he knew the about Lenord. He came to the store about two months ago, and left a sign and asked that orders be received there for him as a piano tuner. He went up to Hawaii about three or four weeks ago.

Lenord, Mr. Wall says, came here from San Francisco, but he had no idea the man was engaged in the kind of business he is said to be in. "If he is doing that kind of business," said Mr. Wall, "he will soon kill himself in this country."

The name of the man who, representing himself as strongly connected with the American Federation of Labor, and is said to be trying to stir up trouble for the plantations by effecting an organization of Japanese, Portuguese and other laborers, is George H. Lenord, a piano-tuner who has his office at the store of Wall, Nichols Company.

This statement is made an authority of some of those whom Lenord has approached with his proposition that they go in with him and aid him in organizing this international union.

Sims Defies Judge Andrade In Police Court SENT TO PRISON FOR CONTEMPT

The worst scene which ever happened in a Hawaiian court took place this forenoon in the Police Court, when W. R. Sims, charged with drunkenness, insulted the court, the prosecuting officer and others present, and finally defied Judge Andrade to step down from the bench, evidently with the intention of making an assault on him. Throughout the affair Judge Andrade showed remarkable tact and patience, and it was only after the matter had become absolutely intolerable that he committed Sims for contempt of court, sentencing him to imprisonment for three days.

When the Sims case was called at about 9 o'clock, Sims was not present and his bail was declared forfeited. Shortly afterwards Sims arrived and moved that the order declaring bail forfeited be set aside. He stated that it had been his intention to forfeit it, but this morning he had seen an article which was prejudicial to his interests, and he wanted to vindicate his reputation by offering evidence.

This motion was granted, and Sims then asked for a continuance until tomorrow. The court set the case for 11 o'clock, and told Sims that in the meantime he could subpoena such witnesses as he might wish to appear for him. Sims immediately issued subpoenas for Ernest Gruene, the keeper of the Hoffmann saloon cigar stand, and one Percy Douglas. All were served with the exception of the latter.

At 11 o'clock Sims came into court, and immediately one of the most exciting scenes which could be imagined was enacted, the excitement lasting from start to finish. "I wish to state that I am here in court voluntarily," said Sims on entering.

"You are here because it is your duty to be here, answered the Court.

As the complaint was being made out by Prosecutor Brown, Sims walked over to the table which has been reserved to the prosecution exclusively under a rule which was promulgated by the Court a few days ago. Sims was asked to go back to the table reserved for attorneys, but this he declined to do, and Officer Madeiros started to remove him.

"Don't put your hands on me," cried Sims wildly. "If you do you assault me. You are assaulting me. I appeal to Your Honor."

The Court explained the new regulation to Sims. "Go over where you belong," he ended.

"Do you mean to say that you have made rules to say where people who have business with the court may go? Have you lines drawn to show people what steps they shall take?"

"Go over where you belong, Mr. Sims," repeated the Court.

Sims still remonstrated and Brown took him by the shoulder to lead him to his place.

"Give me an opportunity to respond," cried Sims, but the Court repeated its order, and a couple of officers dragged him, in spite of his wild struggles, over to his place. During this journey Sims caught hold of the witness stand, and temporarily delaying his progress shouting loudly: "Shame, shame!"
